

I have exciting news to share. Today, we announced that our parent company, Roper Technologies, Inc. (Nasdaq: ROP), has acquired Syntellis Performance Solutions, LLC (Syntellis) and will combine this business with Strata. This is a significant and exciting development for both organizations as it will reinforce our shared goals of delivering value to our clients. The combined business will retain the Strata Decision Technology name, and I am honored to continue on as CEO.

Strata and Syntellis have a rich history of building comprehensive solutions that help healthcare organizations advance their financial planning and performance management practices. Syntellis also delivers intelligent financial planning and data solutions to other industries, such as higher education, financial institutions and commercial markets. Together, our organizations will continue to drive impact and deliver value across each of these industries.

Above all, our companies share a passion of empowering healthcare organizations to address the industry's most pressing challenge – the rising cost of delivering healthcare. By bringing our two leading organizations together, we aim to serve our clients as one of the most helpful companies in healthcare.

To continue delivering client-centric, market-leading solutions, we are focused on executing a thoughtful integration that will deliver multiple long-term benefits to our client network, including:

- Product Innovation: Accelerated investment in software development – to continue strengthening our core solutions and building new tools that address the complex needs of our client network
- Advanced Insights: Strategic innovation in data and analytics – to empower end users and decision makers with actionable insights for improving financial performance
- Client-Focused Delivery: Continued investment and growth in our client services and support – to maintain focus on driving value within our clients' organizations
- Network of Experts: Expanded access to market experts across our combined organization and broad client network – with the most experienced and talented leaders in the industry

Initially, as we move down the path of integration planning over the coming months, we will continue to operate as two separate companies. For you as a client, it will be “business as usual,” and you will continue to work with the same contacts and teams from Strata and Syntellis who currently support your organization.

In the coming weeks, your Strata or Syntellis client relationship lead will be reaching out with more information. In the meantime, you can reach out to your account owners or primary contacts with any additional questions. I also encourage you to view this FAQ.

As always, thank you for your partnership. We are grateful to work closely with such incredible organizations, and for your ongoing support and engagement with our teams.

Best,

John Martino
Chief Executive Officer
Strata Decision Technology